

Introduction

This story will inspire the readers with interesting life experiences, adventure, exploration, workplace, love story, hobbies, etc....

I hope the readers will understand more about us - not thinking we're spoilt children. We are adults. One day you'll get to know us better.

Being special is not really easy because most parents are over protective. They are scared they might lose them. Some parents love to say “no”. For example, they won't allow their children to take public transport, go out with friends to the cities, shopping mall etc.

Some writers in this book want to be loved by a special person. Some parents won't mind and some would say no. Because they are special, that is the problem. Parents should change the thinking and open their minds. But not all parents are like that.

Some writers shared that the government should support and protect the rights of people with disabilities.

I hope the readers will understand and accept persons with learning disabilities better through this book.

On behalf of United Voice, I would like to thank Vijayashanker Foundation & Percetakan Lai Sdn Bhd for co-sponsoring the publication of this book.
